Section F: Comprehension 1 (10 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

"Dad, am I unique?" asked Jack.

"What do you mean?" his father queried, without looking up from the newspaper that he was reading.

"I want to be that unique person to invent the fastest computer or create the next upcoming social media website," replied Jack. 5

Each of his friends had achieved certain accomplishments in their respective strengths and Jack felt envious of them. There was Jennifer who was top of the class in almost every subject. Raja was the fastest runner in the whole school. When it came to music, there was the petite but gifted Rayu who could play any tune you asked for melodiously on the piano. 10

The most handsome boy in class was Mike and he had bright and large eyes. Jack did not want to be handsome like Mike but he wished he was taller and had big strong arms like Farhan.

"Jack, you need to appreciate what you have. You are healthy and smart," his father said, as if he knew what Jack was thinking. "You should treasure your gifts and use them to help others." 15

"Thanks, Dad. However, that's not what I meant. I want to be unique by doing something outstanding," Jack said as he left the room, still thinking what he could do to be less ordinary.

Section G: Comprehension 2 (10 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

Showers of fat water droplets bathed the shopping mall that Sunday evening. My family and I had just ended our scouting for Christmas gifts. We were heading for the car park.

I saw a few shoppers dashing out in the torrential downpour, with their hands over their heads. I wondered why it had to pour at that moment. 5

I was relieved that we did not have to depend on public transport. Soon, we were about to drive out of the shopping mall compound when I spotted a family of three elderly people. An old woman and her two mentally-challenged children, in their mid-fifties, stood near the entrance of the car park. The only umbrella they had offered little shelter from the rain so their clothes were wet thoroughly. 10

I looked at my father as I was overwhelmed with sympathy for them. He too had witnessed the situation. Father stopped the car in front of the trio. Mother got out of the car and invited the worried old lady. After hesitating for a second, she looked at her children. She then agreed gratefully with a smile. 15

The car seat became wet but we were not upset. My sister and I felt ill at ease as there was a lack of space in the car. We were almost squatting on the car floor and our stomachs were growling. However, we did not mind.

Finally, we arrived at the family's residence. Father pulled up his car at their apartment block. The shy old lady uttered thanks in a very low voice. To Father's amusement, she pulled out a ten-dollar note and asked how much the fare was. Declining it, Father accompanied the family to their lobby. 20

We should continue to help the less fortunate as the help given could mean more to them than to us who had extended it. 25
