A. Read the passage carefully.

Last Saturday was a special day for Jane. It was her birthday. On the night of the eve of her birthday, Jane could not sleep well especially thinking about all the presents that she would be getting. As soon as Jane woke up on Saturday morning, she ran swiftly into her parents' room. She found out that they had already left for the office. A note was left on the table, telling her that they would be returning in the evening with her grandparents. Jane started to weep.

"What a birthday!" cried Jane. "Everybody is so busy. Nobody's free to celebrate my birthday with me except for Spot." Spot was her lovable pet and only playmate.

When it was lunch time, Jane stopped playing with Spot. While she was having her lunch, Jane heard familiar voices at the door. She saw her parents, grandparents and Aunt Molly standing at the doorway with their hands full. They all shouted, "Happy birthday, Jane!"

"Are they all for me?" Jane asked in disbelief.

"Yes. There's even one from Spot," said Aunt Molly. Spot had a bracelet in his mouth. On it, were the words, "We love you, Jane". Tears of joy rolled down Jane's cheeks. She was the happiest girl that day.

B) Read the passage carefully.

Deborah and her eleven-year-old older sister, Sandra, are part of the new age of computer learners. Sandra started attending classes a year earlier than Deborah. Deborah had been going for classes for the past two years since she was six. The classes are held weekly.

The pupils are grouped according to their age in their classes. Pupils learn the use of the keyboard to complex tasks such as downloading pictures from the internet. The teacher gives the pupils a treat and allows them to play online games once everyone in the class has mastered what has been taught. The girls find these classes interesting and useful as they are able to use their knowledge to do their assignments and project work.

The children in the beginner classes are taught how to use the computer mouse. Deborah is the only one in her class who knows how to use the mouse well in just one lesson. Her teacher praised her for this. Deborah is curious to know what her sister learns in class. Sandra told her that in her advanced class, she learnt Microsoft PowerPoint.

Both girls excelled in their classes and are now very good with computers.

Answer the following questions in complete sentences. (5 X 2m)

46. How often do the girls go for their computer classes?

47. How old are the pupils in Sandra's class now?
