Lina had always been afraid of the water. Whenever she was near the edge of a pool, her heart would race, and she would quickly step back. While her friends enjoyed swimming, she felt safer sitting at the poolside. Emma, her best friend, was a constant source of encouragement. "Why not give swimming lessons a try? You don't have to dive into the deep end right away. Take it one step at a time," Emma advised. 5

Lina went home and told her mother about the swimming lessons.

"What if I sink?" Lina asked.

"You won't. Even if you struggle at first, you'll improve with practice," assured her mother. 10

Lina agreed to sign up for swimming lessons. Her instructor, Mr. Tan, played an important role in her journey. He taught her how to float. At first, she held onto the edge of the pool, and she was scared. However, she grew more confident with each lesson. Mr. Tan also taught her how to use a floating board to help her with balance. 15

One afternoon during her swimming lesson, Lina swam without holding onto the edge. Emma swam beside her, smiling. "You're doing great!" she said. Lina felt confident, but as she swam further, panic set in. She swallowed some water and coughed.

"I can't do this, I am giving up," she muttered, her arms feeling weak. Emma reached out and said, "I'm right here. Just keep going." 20

Lina took a deep breath and focused on kicking and moving her arms.. Her heart pounded, but she kept repeating, "Believe in yourself." This time, she reached the other side. As she emerged from the water, a smile spread across her face and she could not help but feel proud of her achievement.
