A black cat and a white cat were passing through a street. Suddenly, they spotted a loaf of bread lying under a tree. Both cats pounced upon the loaf and caught it at the same time.

"This is mine. I saw it first," claimed the black cat.

The white cat replied, "I pounced on it first so it belongs to me."

5

After fighting for a while, the black cat said, "Let us share it equally and take a piece each."

"That's a good idea," said the white cat. "But how do we divide it now?"

A monkey sitting on the branch of a tree witnessed what had happened between the two cats. "That loaf of bread looks good. I want to eat it," he thought. Slowly, he came down from the tree and walked up to the cats. "What's the matter? Can I help you?" asked the monkey.

The cats asked, "Can you help us divide this loaf of bread equally?" the monkey agreed immediately.

The monkey broke the bread into two pieces but one piece was a little bigger than the other. "Oh no! I will take a small bite of this bigger piece to make both of them equal," said the monkey slyly. He took a bite from the bigger piece. However, he had taken a big bite. "Now it has become smaller than the other piece. I will just have to take a small bite from the other piece now," said the monkey delightfully.

The clever monkey repeatedly chewed from both pieces of bread. The two cats could only watch helplessly as the two pieces of bread got smaller and smaller. After eating the whole loaf, the monkey said, "I'm sorry. It was really difficult to divide that loaf of bread equally but it is done. You both have nothing equally." Once upon a time, there lived a family of clouds. They were able to create thunder, lightning and rain in an instant. Puffy was the smallest cloud and no matter how hard he tried, he was unable to create more than a few drops of rain. As a result, Puffy was often teased by his siblings.

One day, the family decided to go on a journey to the North Pole as it was time for them to help cover the place with snow. Father told Puffy, "You are too small, the strong wind at the North Pole will blow you all over the sky. It is safer for you to remain behind." Puffy was upset but he knew that his father was right.

A few days later, a terrified grey bird flew up to Puffy asking for help to put out a fire in the bush. Puffy was not able to get to the bush on his own quickly. Intelligent Puffy asked the grey bird to get all the other birds to flap their wings behind him.

In a few minutes, the little grey bird returned with hundreds of birds and with their help, they created enough wind to move Puffy above the bush. Puffy started to squeeze himself as much as he could. However, he could only make a few drops of rain which was not enough to put out the fire.

Knowing that he was not able to help the animals in the forest, Puffy became very sad. As he thought about all the animals losing their homes, Puffy started to cry. Huge drops of rain fell upon the fire continuously and soon, the fire was put out.

The animals in the forest cheered loudly, "Thank you, little cloud, for saving our homes." Puffy felt proud that he had been able to help them. From that day onwards, Puffy did not feel useless anymore as he was certain that in times of need, he would be able to help.
